Broken, Lonely... Then Blessed

By REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

I SERVE as Feast Calamba's Finance head and Singles Shelter leader- missions stemming from way back my youth.

I've been serving in Church since I was young- as a youth leader and choir member.

When the COVID Pandemic came, I lost my spiritual life and entered into a relationship with a non-believer. I thought it was okay and that I could handle it. But that's when I started to stray away from God.

After a year, we broke up. It was a painful breakup because I lost not just a relationship but also many friendships.

In the midst of my brokenness and loneliness, I wanted to go to places where

I could find peace and healing. I knew that only God could give me that, but I was afraid and ashamed to go back to Church.

So, I ended up soul-searching through travels and mountain climbing. During one of my trips, I met a stranger who talked about God. After that encounter, I went home realizing that no matter how far I run away from God, He is still chasing after me.

Eventually, I got tired of running away. So, I surrendered to God.

welcome and embrace me. I found not just friends but a family who prayed for me, and supported me along my journey.

Despite my past sins and shame, God called me to serve again. I joined the iGive Club, Media Ministry, Warmth Ministry, Music Ministry, and the small groups.

I learned how to smile, laugh, and enjoy life once again.

After many travels and therapy sessions, I found healing only in Jesus. He made me new and complete again. He was the missing piece I had been searching for, fulfilling the desires of my heart.

The Lord granted me my dream job, which not only pays twice but more than three times my previous income.

Though I'm still praying for "The One," I am now joyful and grateful, enjoying a comfortable and peaceful life with my family, friends, and Feast Family.

God is faithful to His promises. He will give not only what you want but the best according to His time and purpose.

JUST BREATHING?

LIFE'S A FEAST
REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

There's a woman in her late twenties. No grand title. No thriving career. No car, no house, and no romantic story to tell. Just her—breathing quietly in a small apartment, tucked in a neighborhood where children laugh and play outside her gate every afternoon.

Each day, they call out, "Hello, Ate Ganda!" with sparkling eyes and cheerful grins. They didn't even know her name—that's why they simply called her that. She often wonders, Why are these kids so happy to see me? What have I done for them to deserve such joy and admiration? She never gave them treats or toys, never initiated a conversation. And yet—there they are, eager to greet her (some of the little boys even claiming they have a crush on her!)

One ordinary Wednesday morning, she woke up and opened her window. Her chin rested on her hands, hair tousled, face bare with the imprint of sleep. She stared blankly into the morning sky, lost in thought—Who am I? Why am I even here?

That's when she noticed two kids outside playing badminton, already smiling up at her, as if they had been waiting for her to appear. And in that small, unexpected moment, it felt like heaven whispered.

"Hey, here I am. I see you. I love you—even in your worst, even in your messiest. So cheer up, My child. I'm with you."

Have you ever had someone appreciate you when you least expect it? People you barely know—cheering for you, showing kindness that feels almost unearned? It's easy to brush it off, especially when you don't believe in yourself or see your own worth.

But what if that's exactly how God works? If strangers can see something beautiful in you, how much more does the God who formed you, who knows you inside and out, see? Even when you don't feel Him, He is there. Watching. Guiding.

He is the faithful God who never forgets, never forsakes. He remembers every prayer, every tear, every hidden dream. And He will do whatever it takes to bring you to the place of victory—your purpose, your calling, and ultimately, His loving arms.

So, the next time you feel unseen or unworthy, remember this: even when all you're doing is just breathing—He's smiling at you and whispering to your heart: "You are mine. I see you. And I'm not done with you yet."

BEHIND THE SCENES

LIFE'S A FEAST
REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

To be honest, when I first started serving at church, I was deeply insecure about my family. I believed we were far from the ideal. My parents often argued—sometimes even over the smallest things. I wasn't particularly close to my siblings, and we frequently clashed over our differences and selfish wants. I even questioned my worthiness to serve, especially knowing that my niece and nephew were born out of teenage pregnancies. How could I bring Jesus to others when I couldn't even bring Him fully into my own home?

Still, it remained my long-term prayer: "Lord, one day, may I serve alongside my whole family." In recent months, however, I found myself serving more and bonding less with them. I had just adopted three puppies, caring for them in my apartment. During our Singles Shelter Retreat, I was anxious about leaving them behind. I asked my sister if someone from the family could drop by to feed and check on them. But I didn't expect much—she had already expressed hesitation, afraid the dogs might bite them since they weren't familiar. With no signal at the retreat, I couldn't follow up. All I could do was pray that my puppies would be okay.

Then came the surprise: as I was heading home, my sister messaged me, saying they brought home the puppies. When I came home, I was stunned. The dogs had been well cared for—they were even wearing diapers, treated like little babies! At that moment, I felt God whisper: "I've been here all along."

Sometimes, we think God only answers when our big dreams come true. I was so focused on wanting to serve with my family that I almost missed how they've been serving with me, in quiet ways—by showing up, supporting me, and stepping in when I needed help the most. They loved and served without asking for my recognition. That is Jesus, alive in my family. And God, in His perfect timing, keeps planting seeds.

Just one Saturday night, before bed, my nephew—falling asleep said, "Tomorrow, I will go serve." He even turned down an invitation from his cousins to play, choosing instead to go to church. My heart melted. This was a prayer answered, even just in part.

Not in my timing, but in God's. I know this journey is far from over. God is still writing the story. But I've learned that when you surrender everything to Him—your pain, your prayers, your family, your ministry—He moves in ways you don't expect. And He never forgets.

He sees you. He's working, even behind the scenes.

WHEN TO SURRENDER?

LIFE'S A FEAST
REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

I play Mobile Legends, a game where two teams of five battle real time. When the match becomes difficult and victory seems impossible, the team has the option to surrender by voting to forfeit the game. In the thousands of matches I've played, I can count on one hand the number of times I initiated a surrender vote. Why? Because I firmly believe, "Habang may buhay, may pag-asa." (While there is life, there is hope.)

This belief extends beyond gaming—it shapes how I approach real life. When it comes to the things I desire most, I refuse to give up easily. I pray persistently, trusting in God's power to make a way. But lately, I've wrestled with a difficult question: Should I keep praying, or is it time to surrender?

During the Feast Conference 2024, Fr. Francis Gustillo spoke words that struck my heart. He said, "You actually surrender to God when you stop thinking about it and praying for it."

For months, I tried to surrender—I stopped thinking about it, stopped praying for it. But instead of peace, I felt lost and burdened. Each morning, I woke up hoping for a new day filled with joy and renewed purpose, only to find myself still waiting.

In my struggle, I cried out to God, "Give me the courage to face each day with strength. Help me stand up and walk forward again. Remind me, Lord, that my life is not about achievements but about fulfilling the mission You have called me to."

In that moment, I realized that surrendering doesn't mean giving up. It doesn't mean passively waiting for God to act while we do nothing. Surrender means doing our part with excellence and entrusting the outcome to God. It means releasing control and believing that whatever happens, His plan is always greater.

Surrender isn't about stopping; it's about trusting. It's about faithfully walking the path God has set before us, knowing He will fulfill the desires He has planted in our hearts at the right time. He is with us in every season, in every struggle, even in the messiness of life. He has never forgotten us, and He never will.

Take heart. Fear not. Keep pressing forward in faith, for God is always with you.

Be joyful in hope, patient in affliction, faithful in prayer. – Romans 12:12

NEAR MISS BLESSINGS

LIFE'S A FEAST
REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

Have you ever experienced something that seemed so right, only to watch it slip away? You pray, you hope, and just when you think it's finally happening, it vanishes—leaving you with confusion and doubt. It feels like a near miss, much like an accident that almost happened but didn't. But what if that "near miss" was actually God's way of protecting you from something that wasn't meant for you?

Not long ago, I found myself in a situation like this. I met someone who seemed to align perfectly with my values and interests. We quickly built a connection, sharing conversations, laughter, and a growing friendship. But just as I started wondering where it was leading, he suddenly disappeared without a word. I was left questioning everything—was this a missed opportunity, or was God trying to tell me something?

Through prayer and reflection, I realized an important truth: God's answered prayers do not leave us in confusion. He is a God of peace and order. If something leads to doubt, uncertainty, or heartache, it may not be from Him. Just as He saves us from near miss accidents, He also saves us from near miss blessings—things that seem good but fall short of His perfect plan.

God is faithful. He sees our hearts, knows our needs, and never forgets us. He does not give incomplete answers or almost blessings. He fulfills His promises in His perfect time. What He withholds now is not a denial but a redirection to something far greater.

Trust Him. Even when things don't go as planned, believe that He is leading you toward something better. Surrender your desires, remain faithful, and when the right season comes, you will receive a blessing far greater than what you once thought you lost.

Put it in writing, because it is not yet time for it to come true. But the time is coming quickly, and what I show you will come true. It may seem slow in coming, but wait for it; it will certainly take place, and it will not be delayed. -Habakkuk 2:3

THE COURAGE TO SURRENDER

LIFE'S A FEAST

REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

Are you finding it hard to answer God's calling for your life? You're not alone! Even those who have served God for years, like me, face challenges along the way. But let me share something I've learned: sharing your time, talents, and treasures isn't as hard as it seems. What's truly tough is obeying God's will—surrendering your wants, following His path, and trusting Him completely.

Sometimes, we think that serving God will make life easier, that everything will instantly fall into place. Life's struggles don't disappear when we serve Him. Prayers aren't always answered right away. But the truth is, it often becomes more challenging. Why? Because we're no longer following our own desires—we're walking God's path instead.

This reminds me of three inspiring women in the Bible:

Martha was busy serving Jesus, and He appreciated her hard work. But Mary chose to sit at Jesus' feet, listening to Him and spending time with Him. Both women loved Jesus, but Jesus said Mary had chosen the better part.

The lesson? God values our work, but what He desires most is our presence—our willingness to spend time with Him and grow in faith.

Mama Mary is a powerful example of trusting God. Despite the uncertainties and impossibilities she faced, she obeyed God's will with faith. Her response to the angel's message was simple but profound:

"I am the servant of the Lord. May it be done to me according to Your word."

Because of her trust, God worked a miracle through her that changed the world forever.

Serving God doesn't mean forcing our plans or relying on our strength. It requires courage to surrender—to let go of what we want and trust that God's plan is better.

True happiness comes when we allow God to lead, trusting that His path is for our good. When we walk with Him, not just work for Him, we find peace and joy that no struggle can take away.

If you're struggling to answer God's call, let me pray with you:

"Lord, I surrender my worries, my fears, and my plans to You. Help me to trust Your ways, knowing that You always have the best for me. Teach me to walk with You, to listen to Your voice, and to find joy in Your presence. Amen."

Remember, serving God isn't about being perfect or having all the answers. It's about staying close to Him, trusting Him, and letting Him work through you. With God, even the toughest journeys become a blessing.

The True Response To God's Love

LIFE'S A FEAST

REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

When I was a little kid, I used to earn my parents' approval by doing the best I could. I needed to be an honor student each year to receive rewards like a new phone, money, or simply to outshine my siblings. I strived to make it more meaningful for my father when he returned home, wanting to bring honor and glory to our family name as he proudly hung my hard-earned medal around my neck. All the while, I aimed to reciprocate the dedication he showed us while working thousands of miles away.

Recently, I realized that's how I also viewed God. I felt the need to attend mass every Sunday, confess my sins monthly, and serve Him with the talents He bestowed upon me. Loving my brothers, sisters, and even those who annoyed me seemed like the path to please the Lord. I used to believe that repaying Him with hard work was the way to respond to His love.

One exhausting day, as I felt the weight of my efforts, I felt a deep unhappiness within me. I prayed and complained to God, questioning why following Him felt so burdensome and demanding. But then, as I contemplated the crucifixion of Jesus, I was reminded: "You don't need to labor so hard; I have already done it for you. All you need to do is accept the love I freely offer."

I had been so consumed with worldly pursuits, thinking I was fulfilling my purpose by serving others, that I forgot the fundamental truth: God loved me from the beginning, regardless of my actions. He loved me even when I was simply resting, because that's who He is—loving, understanding, and not requiring anything in return. When I criticized myself for not doing enough, God simply whispered, "I love you." It was then that I began to understand what love truly is: not an exchange for hard work, but an acceptance of God's love through His grace and mercy, freely given even when unasked for.

Now, instead of asking myself, "What am I doing for the Lord?" I've begun to ask, "How am I receiving from the Lord?"

Dear brethren, I understand how exhausting it can feel to serve the Lord at times. But let us remember this: In all our endeavors, may we find the love of God that permeates through our actions, ministries, families, friends, and even strangers around us. Let us be open to receiving His love and grace abundantly.

THE BEAUTY IN WAITING

LIFE'S A FEAST
REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

Do you remember the first time you applied for school, a scholarship, or a job? Back when I was in college, I was applying for an internship, and I hated hearing, "Tatawagan na lang namin kayo (We will just call you back)." To me, it always sounded more like, "Tatawanan na lang namin kayo (We'll just laugh at you)." It felt like they were saying, "Don't bother waiting. This isn't for you." The uncertainty was unbearable.

I often find myself asking God, "Why does waiting have to be so hard?" I'm a goal-driven person, and when things don't happen quickly, I start losing patience and motivation—especially when it's something I want so badly. The wait can feel like a burden.

Then one Sunday, something changed. I saw a dear friend who had been away, resting during her pregnancy. I hadn't seen her for months and missed her so much. The joy of seeing her again was overwhelming, and as I excitedly touched her growing belly, I felt God whisper to me, "Trust My timing." I brushed it off at first, thinking, I'm single, what does that have to do with me? But the message was deeper. It was God asking me, Why are you doubting My timing for your life?

The past few weeks and months have tested my patience. Waiting is tough. It's so tempting to try to control everything yourself, especially when it feels easier to trust what you can see and manage. But then, I realized: If God can create life inside a womb, why can't I trust Him to shape my entire life? We want to hold everything in our hands, thinking it will make life easier. But in reality, we become overwhelmed, exhausted, and discouraged.

We need to surrender. We need to trust that even in the chaos, trials, and struggles, God is with us. We are never walking this path alone. The same God who rescued you from past heartaches, failures, insecurities, and disappointments is still at work. He is faithful to His promises of healing, strength, victory, and abundance. Nothing is impossible for Him—not even the most unbelievable.

So, trust the process. Be patient with His timing, because the best is yet to come. That's the beauty of waiting: Your life is a masterpiece in progress, and God makes everything beautiful in His time (Ecclesiastes 3:11).

Puppy Love

LIFE'S A FEAST
REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

Do you remember your first love? Perhaps it was a schoolmate or a playmate from your neighborhood. Looking back, it's funny to think about how we were drawn to someone who might have been a bit smelly, dirty, or even a little annoying, yet we still found them cute. Puppy love is often dismissed as just a silly childhood memory. We tend to underestimate the capacity of children, assuming they're too young and inexperienced to grasp the complexities of love. But one afternoon, my understanding of love deepened when I saw a young boy and a girl at church.

As I watched the children, I saw how simple love truly is—it's us adults who complicate things. I saw two people simply enjoying each other's company, laughing together, and sharing stories. They had their fights, but at the end of the day, they chose to forgive each other. They would smile, play, and laugh together again. Their love is so pure because it's based not on appearances but on trust and the joy they bring to each other. Their innocence makes them so trusting and unafraid to take risks; they are just enjoying life.

That afternoon, God imparted a beautiful lesson in my heart. God loves us like a child—always forgiving, always choosing us because He delights in being with us and wants us to enjoy life with Him. I pray that we may also learn to love others like a child—pure, unconditional, with trust and forgiveness at all times.

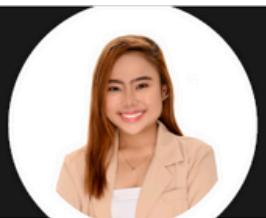

"Anyone who welcomes a little child like this on my behalf welcomes me, and anyone who welcomes me welcomes not only me but also my Father who sent me." Mark 9:36-37 (NLT)

GOD OF THE MIDDLE

LIFE'S A FEAST
REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

Are you in the middle of something you're going through? In the midst of side-by-side problems? In the midst of pain and sickness? In the midst of drowning in financial debts? A midlife crisis? Stuck in a toxic relationship? Waiting in a long queue or waiting for someone, or an answered prayer?

As the mid-year approaches, I feel lost in the midst of where I want to go and what God wants me to do. I know how it feels to wait. Waiting for that perfect timing feels boring to me. It's hard to wait for something uncertain—waiting for my turn, waiting for my breakthrough, waiting for an answered prayer—while seeing others celebrate their big achievements and small wins, while I am in the midst of nowhere. It makes me wonder why God, who is the God of the beginning and the end, is so hard to see amid chaos.

Until one day, while on a bathroom break, a realization struck me. God is more interested in what you're doing and becoming rather than what you're finishing.

God looks at how persistent I am in doing tasks I hate, how consistent I am in showing up even when it's hard to wake up early in the morning, and how committed I am to doing things He has made me responsible for in my work, family, and ministry. I was too focused on hitting my target that I forgot God was molding me and preparing me for the blessings I am waiting to receive.

The process is messy and painful, but He's molding me so I have the capacity to hold the big blessings He has for me. Otherwise, they might slip through my hands and be wasted.

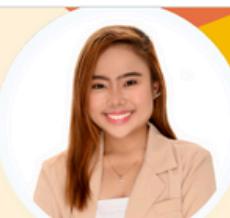

Dear friend, if you're in the midst of something and you feel far from God, remember that God sees your hard work. He sees those sweats and tears on your pillow and hears those cries at night. Sometimes, we don't understand how He works. But I pray that we may be open to His presence always, as He might speak to us in unexpected ways, just like during a bathroom break.

God is not just the God at the beginning and the end; He is also the God in the middle who is always with us. You can reach out to Him. You can call to Him. He sees you. He cares for you. He is faithful and will reward all your hard work. One day you will look back and say, "Thank you, God. We made it together."

WHEN GOD DOESN'T PICK UP

LIFE'S A FEAST
REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

Have you prayed to God, but it seems He is not giving you what you wanted? Or perhaps He gives you something different, or even rejects your prayers? Worse still, God might not seem to be answering at all, remaining silent?

I used to believe that I am favored by the Lord and that there was no prayer He couldn't answer. I believed prayer works and would work for me if I put in the effort.

Two years ago, I prayed for a miracle to restore a past relationship, hoping for a fresh start. I made every effort to mend the broken relationship. I begged and compromised, but I still ended up disappointed and heartbroken. In one day, all my hopes for the future crumbled away. I felt lost and broken, having lost not just love but also the future I envisioned.

Eventually, I realized that no amount of hard work could change the person or the situation. So instead, I focused on making internal changes. After a year, I achieved what I wanted, but I still felt empty. So I prayed to God again for a miracle. I tried once more to rekindle that relationship, but there was no response. God remained silent.

One day, as I opened my five-year-old notebook where I had written my 100 dreams, I was surprised to see that many of my prayers had been answered over time, even after those heartbreaks. He led me to a path where He was building the dreams I had truly been praying for. He also led me to people who are kind, loving, and safe, allowing me to build healthy relationships. People's rejections are God's redirections.

After two years, God made it clear why those prayers were left unanswered. I now understand why He wasn't giving me the man I asked for because He's preparing the man for me. God remains faithful to His promises.

Above all, I realized that I don't need to beg and chase after love because the love I need is already within me. It has been given to me, even without asking. Despite my shameful and sinful past, God blesses and fulfills the desires of my heart. This kind of love is more than enough, making me marvel and feel in awe at how God's original plans always prevail, even when He seems silent and unresponsive.

Dear brethren, if you feel like you're calling out to God a hundred times but it seems like He's not answering, don't lose hope. God is not missing your call. He's listening. His plans are always better than we can comprehend. He will not only give you what you want, but He will also give you what is best, not through your hard work, but graciously according to His time and purpose.

GOD'S GRACE AND GENEROSITY IN FORGIVENESS

LIFE'S A FEAST
REINALYN JOY CUMPIO

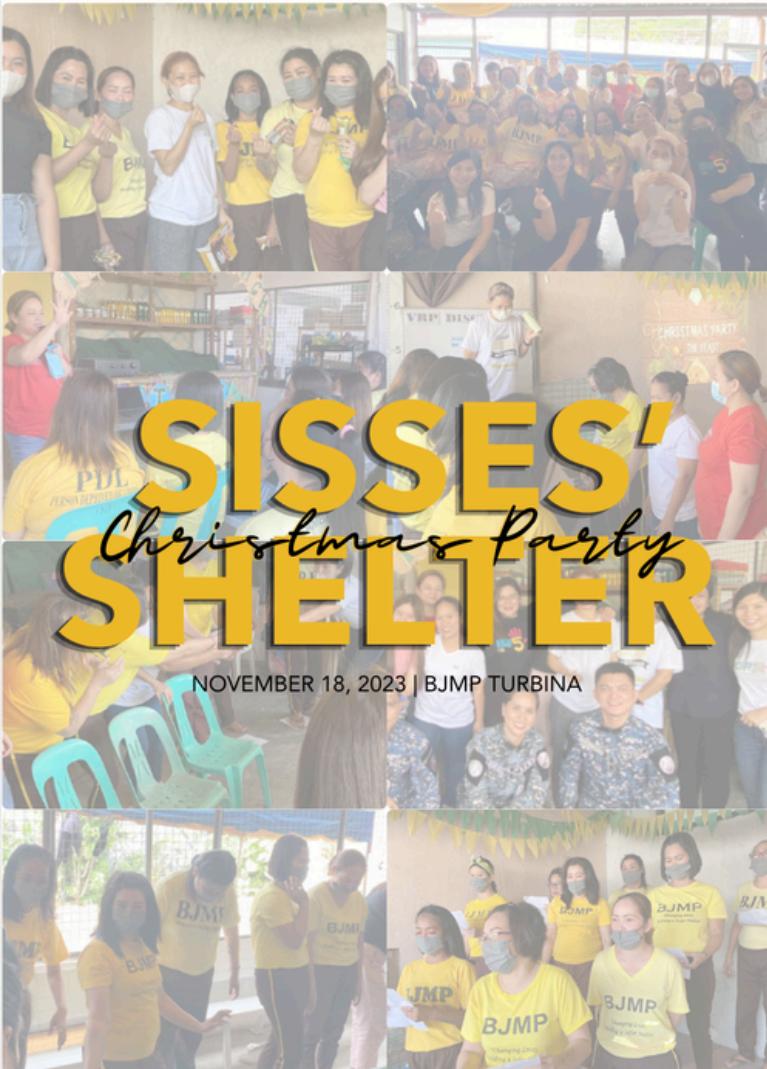

I'll be honest; supporting the Prison Mission of Feast Calamba was a challenge due to my upbringing and rigid views on handling mistakes. My high expectations for both myself and others made accepting failure difficult.

Last August, questioning my worthiness in ministry, I withdrew from my service, feeling undeserving. However, in late September, I came across Romans 8:1 again, and it resonated with me: "There's no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus."

In October, upon returning to The Feast, I attempted to hide due to shame. Unexpectedly, someone I was avoiding greeted me warmly, triggering a realization. I excessively condemned myself for mistakes, yet God eagerly welcomes me back when I stray. This encounter shifted my outlook on accepting mistakes and understanding our brethren in prison.

On November 18, our all-women small group called Sisses Shelter spent our Christmas party at the Bureau of Jail Management and Penology in Turbina. I had the privilege of serving our sisters in prison, and it was a humbling experience. I came to understand that there are no big or small sins in God's eyes. Comparing my sins to others became senseless, as, at the end of the day, we all have one God who forgives us, regardless of our perceptions of sin size. It is not for me to condemn myself or others because only God can judge us; only He sees our hearts. Forgiveness and favor come from God's grace alone. His salvation is available to everyone who calls on His name.

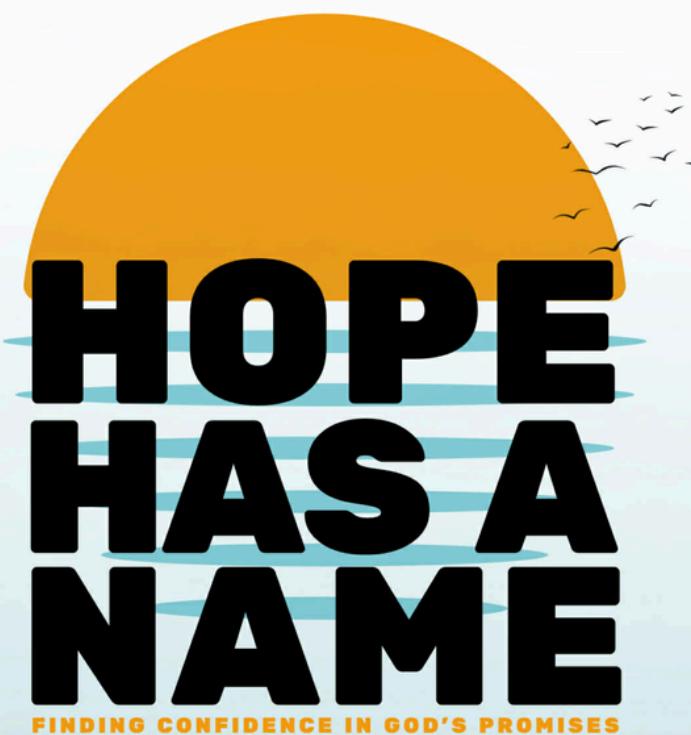

Realizing that forgiveness and redemption stem solely from God, I aim to share this Gospel of hope with anyone striving to lead a righteous life. God offers a fresh start to all, being merciful and generous to those seeking healing and forgiveness.

The Tiny Thread in The Midst
by Reinalyn Joy Cumpio

Can faith and hope co-exist at the same time? Have you ever felt you keep on praying but you lose the confidence that God will answer you?

I believe that God hears prayer even the smallest voice from the heart left unspoken– but is He also listening to the prayer that is almost shouting at the top of your lungs out of despair?

Is God really listening to our prayers?

Seasons of Uncertainty

Before the year 2025 began, I was really discerning what hope really means for me. I've been serving the Lord for almost twelve years so I know since then I have faith. Yeah, I believe but I don't want to expect anything– "Thy will be done" was how I was ending my every prayer.

This year is one of the most challenging years for me. I've been a freelance Virtual Assistant for almost two years and I thought I am ready with any uncertainty. I started the year ending my two year project hoping I am landing a better career path for me. As the first quarter was ending, that new project has also ended without any hints in advance. I was confident that it would not be hard for me to ace new clients. I have a competitive background, know how to sell myself, and what I bring to the table. Truly enough, I wasn't vacant with projects but I got low paying clients and often gave me headaches because we are not aligned with some ideals so I have to let them go.

The second quarter has passed, and I'm still having a hard time finding stable projects. I came to the point of questioning myself with this career path so I tried to apply in academic institutions as a College Instructor. One month later, I was hired. Ironically, after two weeks, a friend approached me for a new project. I didn't expect that I would be hired. I thought I could manage to work two jobs but after a month, I quit my night job because I wanted to focus full time on teaching.

The third quarter came and I started to lose heart with my teaching job. I am praying about quitting and every time I do that God is funny to quickly answer me. I will receive interview invitations to the job postings I didn't apply for but I was not sure if I would get back to freelance work again because I started to enjoy teaching. I wanted to think of it as a test of faith to remain firm in serving the youth in school. But still I kept on praying for God to enlighten me, and on the third time I tried to accept an invitation. After three days, I got a new project which I believed God answered my prayer to align me to the company with the same values in moral and financial.

Points to Ponder

1. God revealed to me what I am missing out all this time— I thought I was believing but the truth is I was trusting myself too much. That's why when everything seems to be failing, I have started to doubt and fear. I realized what I am missing out all this time— my plans may fail, but my God will never. God will always be faithful and that gives me hope once more.
2. I may lose faith several times but hope is what keeps me holding on to God— a tiny breath that keeps me going, a tiny thread even seems invisible, I can still hold on to. I realized that hope has been there since then and that it is Jesus who is there in the beginning and the end.
3. It is truly when we trust Him with our whole heart, we can have true hope, real joy and full confidence in Him because we believe that God will never disappoint us— He is an ever faithful God who is the same yesterday, today, tomorrow and forever.

Heart Check

1. Have I lost faith in God but continue to pray? What is it that keeps me holding on?
2. Am I truly surrendering to God, or am I only surrendering because I see no other hope?

Prayer

Dear Jesus, You are the God who walks on the water. Help me to trust that You are walking with me through my doubts and fears. Please nurture the small hope in my heart that You will bring about the future I am praying for.

Dive Deeper:

Be joyful in hope, patient in affliction and persistent in prayer. -Romans 12:12

PAINTING GUIDE

Meet Taylor, a young and passionate artist who has seamlessly blended her love for surfing and Aboriginal Australian art. From winning a prestigious scholarship to creating breathtaking surfboard designs with Paints, Taylor shares her journey, techniques, and the importance of staying true to one's artistic vision. Discover how this 13-year-old prodigy uses her unique style to tell captivating stories of the ocean and its ecosystem, encouraging artists of all levels to create from the heart.

1. Can you provide us with a brief background on your journey as an artist and tell us what you're currently working on in the world of art?

I began my art journey in 2023 when I received a Highly Commended award for my NAIDOC artwork from the Queensland government. From there, I went on to win the Young, Black, and Proud scholarship, a grant supporting young people's artistic, sporting, or academic dreams. This scholarship boosted my small passion into action. Because of the scholarship, I was able to release my first collaboration with a beach throw company in 2023.

I'm only 13, so it was a pretty big deal for me. Currently, I have completed a commission piece for the Department of Education, and I am in the process of a collaboration with a local swimwear brand and designing packaging for a skincare company.

2. We'd love to know how you came across SurfPaints. What aspects of SurfPaints do you find most appealing or inspiring for your art?

I first came across SurfPaints when I started surfing a few years ago. I searched many shops but could never find them until I came across a small surf shop that finally stocked them. Right away, I pictured a design in my mind and knew I had to buy them. Unlike any other brand I had seen before, SurfPaints were the perfect way to combine my two passions—surfing and Aboriginal Australian art. SurfPaints inspired me to take my art to a new level and gave me the opportunity and confidence to create something that reflected me.

3. Every artist faces unique challenges in their projects. Could you share specific challenges you've encountered in your art projects and how SurfPaints have been a helpful resource in overcoming these challenges?

In Aboriginal art, there are no standard colors, and every artist has a diverse and unique style. For me, I love neutrals and pastels that depict stories of the ocean and its fragile ecosystem. My colors don't suit everyone, and it is sometimes hard to find the right medium. SurfPaints, with its wide range of colored pens, was a helpful resource to overcome this challenge and helped me to pursue my creative journey further.

4. Your painting projects are all unique and have captured our attention. Could you share with us your most favourite project and how you came up with the idea?

My favorite project using SurfPaints was when I created a story of the ocean and its connections to the land on my surfboard. After purchasing SurfPaints, I quickly designed a piece that promoted my ideas and told a sentimental storyline. Aboriginal art is a traditional technique that is not only renowned for its appealing features but also its unique ability to tell a story within itself. I came up with my project by drafting certain elements, like a running water connection, palm trees, and clusters of sea flowers. In my vision, these all represent the ocean and all its beauty.

5. As an experienced artist, do you have any valuable tips or techniques that you could share with others interested in creating painting projects with SurfPaints?

A useful technique I recommend when using SurfPaints is to always draft your design before you begin painting and not to rush the process. Art doesn't adhere to a time limit and may take a few sessions before it's perfect—just like it did for me.

Bonus Question:

As an artist, what message or piece of advice would you like to impart to other artists at all levels, from beginners to seasoned professionals, who are passionate about expressing themselves through this medium?

As an artist passionate about sharing and relating to various forms of art, I would advise creators of all levels to continue making art that reflects you and your passions, without altering it based on others' opinions. Create art that you genuinely love, not art that you feel obligated to love. For me, SurfPaints have been the best way to express my passions and illuminate my art journey.

ABOUT ME

Reinalyn Joy Cumpio

Hi! Congratulations on taking the first step to start and scale your business.

I'm thrilled that you found my profile and that we've connected. I'm here to share my passion for creating engaging online experiences. I've successfully served clients across various industries, including e-commerce and professional services, helping them achieve their digital goals.

With 7 years of experience as an online business owner—covering cosmetics trading, insurance services, and real estate sales—I've developed a deep passion for crafting content that tells stories and influences audiences. I've unlocked the secrets of digital marketing and have a solid understanding of psychology, allowing me to analyze consumer behavior and understand why certain things become social trends.

This enables me to create

content that converts.

I'd love to help you get started! Are you ready?

ACHIEVEMENTS

I streamline workflows, boost productivity, and drive growth through targeted, creative digital marketing strategies—all while treating your business with an entrepreneurial mindset that values efficiency and impact.
